National Outdoor Leadership School The National Outdoor Leadership School (NOLS) is a nonprofit outdoor education organization founded in 1962 by seven outdoor educators for youth and adults who want to pursue adventure leadership education. NOLS now offers 9 educational programs for 16-19 year olds, and 3 programs for older adults, and over 450 programs for youth and adults in 14 countries across the United States, Asia, Europe, South America, and Africa. History In 1960, Ray Spangler and Forrest Olson thought of a way to make lifelong friends that might help ease the effects of the postwar "Silent Crisis" on Western youth, and how such friendship could be promoted through an elite wilderness program run by academic administrators and faculty. In 1962, they and their colleagues founded the National Outdoor Leadership School (NOLS) in the town of Crested Butte, Colorado. The school offered its first course in June 1962, with 42 students. As of 2018, 60,000 students from more than 180 countries have attended NOLS courses, with the number having grown substantially over the years. Graduates
